

The FCC rules which prohibit a media company from owning both a local TV station and a local newspaper should remain in effect. This best serves the public interests and offers real options, rather than a drift to purely propaganda.